

Henry. The angry storms of war have swept the earth with fire. Her temple stands, unscathed, unharmed, with sunlight on its spire.

Old empires, long the praise of men, have faded from the earth. Kings with their thrones have passed away since Massey had birth.

The scepter monarch, in his pride, has long since met his doom. And naught is left of his domain, save solitude and gloom.

The glittering towers of Troy, to which the feet of Priam came, to meet a welcome for their deeds, from lips of Spartan dame, have long since toppled from their base, and moldered to decay.

The glory of that mighty race with them has passed away. Amid the ravages that swept the cities of the plain, mid crumbling of imperial thrones, the fall of tower and fane; Fair Misery has still survived, the nation's horrid doom.

A beacon, mid the night of years, to gild the clouds of gloom.

Through every age stern bigotry has sought to crush her form, but, unsubdued, she bravely met the tempest and the storm.

The clouds of persecution fled before her steady ray, as shades of deepest night before the rising orb of day.

From Oriental climes she came, to bless this Western world, and rear her temple 'neath the flag that liberty unfurled.

Fair freedom welcomed to our shores this maid of Heavenly birth; while thousands of the humble poor now own her gracious worth.

Ten thousand widows, in their weeds, have blest her advent here, and any man's homeless orphan's heart has owned her tender care.

Full many a frail and erring son to dissipation given, has heard her warning voice, and turned his wayward thoughts to Heaven.

Long may her benignant temple stand, to light this darkened sphere; to gild the gloom of error's night, and dry the falling tear.

And when the final winds of time shall sweep this reeling ball, Oh, may its glittering spire be the last on earth to fall.

[From the Southern Cultivator.]
What an Old Man Would Do if he were Now Young.

NUMBER III.

Editors Southern Cultivator.—In former articles I promised to detail a process of manufacturing a domestic manure, much more cheaply than we can buy the current Commercial Guano and Phosphates. I proceed to do this. The manure is substantially "Mapes Salt Mixture"—a full cord of which, "equal to Guano," can be manufactured at an expense of one bushel of salt, and three bushels of lime, exclusive of the labor and small cost of apparatus.

I had this process detailed to me in a letter from my old and marvelously gifted friend—that grand monumental man of the ancient Virginia nobility of nature—whose superior, in all the attributes of an exalted, heroic, manhood, is not to be found in the long list of venerable names which will adorn the history of Southern patriotism, statesmanship and valor—General Henry A. Wise—who will be admired for his genius and eloquence, respected for his wisdom, and revered for his virtues; by the sons and daughters of the true South, as long as the bones of old Livy were remembered in Evangelium mortalium judicio digni. Let this be written on his epitaph too! That inhabitant of Cadiz, who went to Rome "to see Livy, and returned to his home without seeing anything else, because there was 'nothing else worthy of notice," might now be satisfied to visit Virginia, and return with a consciousness that there was little to be seen there, besides Henry A. Wise! Excuse this spontaneous tribute to a friend, who is not my friend, more than the friend of learning, of agriculture, of truth, honor and humanity—a man of more practical knowledge, self-sustaining power, patriotic zeal and unselfish devotion to good men and true principles, than any living man I know. If I could have succeeded in calming the political sea in 1860, and making this man President as I vainly tried to do, at the Baltimore Convention, I should not now be this graceless old hermit, in the midst of the graves of kindred and friends. But Satis superque! Let us to the "Salt Mixture."

In January, 1866, I wrote to Col. Nat. Tyler, of the Richmond Enquirer, respecting the Commercial Manure to be had in that locality. He handed my letter to Gen. Wise, to whom it made reference in another connection, but who replied to this part of it in this wise. I extract from his letter as a favor to your readers:

"You can't have the concentrated manures sent to you, as you propose at five times their value. Make your own manure! A pit 2 feet deep, 8 by 10 square—the bottom made firm, and inclining to one corner; at the lower corner place a reservoir, sunk below the corner, to catch the fluid percolating through the compost in pit; in that reservoir fix a hand-pump; cover the pit by a roof on posts seven feet high above ground; then in the bottom of the pit lay muck 8 inches thick; then cover the muck with the manure, 4 inches thick; then muck again 8 inches, and then manure 4 inches; and so on until you reach up 4 feet high or 4 1/2 and then top off with muck—muck at top and bottom. On the top put a trough or shallow tray, with holes in the bottom; this tray the same size of your compost heap, say 8 feet long, 4 feet wide, and 4 1/2 feet high—a full cord of more than 128 cubic feet. Then dissolve one bushel of salt, in just water enough to dissolve it. Pour that brine in reservoir; then dissolve three bushels of lime in water to make a strong milk of lime. Pour that milk in the brine in the reservoir, and mix them well. Then put your tray on the compost heap, and pump the salt mixture into the tray, and let the mixture percolate through the compost. It will run back into the reservoir, and can be re-pumped, say once every two days, and in six days, you will have a cord of manure equal to guano."

I shall try this process in the fall season. I know personally that Ex-Governor Wise is one of the best, informed and practical men in America. It strikes me, however, that the process he describes, may be advantageously dispensed with, by making the compost heaps in the open field, and mixing the salt and lime mixture with the muck and manure, as the layers are put into the pens, and leaving them well covered, to be used, on the ground, at planting time. His process is indispensable to making a commercial manure for transportation.

I suggest it as not improbable, that the same end, of enriching the soil, might be more advantageously attained, by putting the muck and manure in the open furrow at once, pouring the mixture upon it, and covering it up with a turn plow. The whole subject is suggestive and may prompt practical experiments of value.

Had I thy harp, O MARO, I would sing, Like thee, the glories of my native land— On lips of mine, distilled no honey-dew of spring, No laurel branch such as in my infant hand, But with devotion, such as touch'd thy heart, I plead and pray for flocks and fertile fields: O Mantua! teach me how to inspire the part This globe's land shall play, when fatten'd d'yeids Each acre, ten-fold of its fleecy crop, With grain each mountain trembling to its top!

VARIOUS.

Radical Missionaries.

If the people of this section needed any demonstration to prove that the object of the Radical party is to revolutionize public sentiment in the South, and gain a foothold for that party in our midst, the recent advent of one of their missionaries into this community develops the fact in glaring significance. The reconstruction measures were thus intended, and we have never concealed the fact that a hope of defeating their designs has induced us to give adhesion to those measures. It is possible that the policy we have advocated, might fail to accomplish its object, but there is no safety in supinely allowing these chains to be forged upon our limbs. Once the State is allowed to pass into the hands of those men, whose legislation will be directed against the interests of the white race, and exclusively for the benefit of the colored population, and years will elapse before the intelligence and civilization of the people will be heard in the halls of legislation. This is clearly shown by the present condition of Tennessee, which was re-organized at the cessation of hostilities, in hundreds and thousands of citizens declined to take part in the elections then pending. It is to avert this doom that we have strenuously urged the policy of participating, to the fullest extent, in the coming elections.

[Anderson Intelligencer.]

Registration.

What we need is to organize State governments upon some sure basis, and rescue our race from hostile and degrading domination. This must be done. It can be done by dealing wisely with the stormy elements which surround us. Not by drawing party lines, nor by arraying race against race to our common ruin, but by uniting all races and classes in a common effort to promote their true interests, as citizens of the same State, all alike, dependent upon her welfare and prosperity, and mutually dependent upon each other. It may now be too late, but an honest, united and intelligent effort of our people in this direction, would have insured success. But surely no good can result from a voluntary forfeiture of the right to vote, whether any good is to come of registration or not. If the white people fail to register, it will be laid at the door of rebellious obstinacy, and may lead to the permanent disfranchisement, by a provision of the new State Constitution, of all who willingly omit to register and take part in the organization of the new government. Wilder and more unreasonable measures than this may prevail, if our people proclaim in advance, their enmity to the new government, by refusing to register, and let all who can register, use their best powers and influence to organize a government under which we and our children can live in peace, at least, if not in contentment.—Camden Journal.

HUMOROUS.

The Devil to Pay.

This phrase doubtless, originated in a printing office, on some Saturday night's settlement of wages. "John," says the publisher to the book-keeper, "how stands the cash account?" "Small balance on hand, sir." "Let's see," rejoined the publisher, "how far that will go towards satisfying the hands!" John begins to figure arithmetically. So much due to Potkins, so much to Typus, so much to Grubbe, and so on, through a dozen names; The publisher stands aghast. "Here is not money enough by a jugful." "No sir, and besides, there is the 'Devil to pay'!"

A firm was lately advertised in a newspaper in which all the beauty of the situation, fertility of the soil, and salubrity of the air, were detailed in the richest glow of rural description, and which was further enhanced with this N. B. "There is not an attorney within fifteen miles of the neighborhood."

An Alabama merchant recently sold $10 worth of goods in one day. The Mobile Tribune says, a committee is to wait on him to see what he is going to do with all that money. They take hard times jauntily down there.

In Portland Me., the liquor business is a thing of the past. All the old resorts of Fore-street are closed. One of them has put up the following placard: "Bar taken out; prayer-meeting at four o'clock."

THE Southern Christian Advocate. THIRTIETH VOLUME. THIS WELL KNOWN RELIGIOUS FAMILY newspaper, commenced its THIRTIETH VOLUME in January, 1867, under the editorial control of the REV. E. H. MYERS, D. D., who has conducted it for the past twelve years. Devoted to Religion and the interests of the Church of Christ—an organ of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, in the South-Eastern States—of high literary character—having among its contributors and correspondents many of the most eminent divines in that Church, and giving due attention to every question of public importance, to facts in Science and art, to the News, to the Markets, etc., etc., we deem it the very paper for the Family, where but one paper is taken, and worthy a place with the best, where several are taken. Besides, it is emphatically the paper for the poor man, (and such we all are now) for it is cheaper, style and size considered, than any paper in the Southern States. As a medium of extensive country advertising, it is the best paper in the South East, having a wide range of circulation, and a large list of subscribers in South Carolina, Georgia, Florida and Alabama.
